COURSE

ARH 280 (3)
European Art, Culture and Society
This course is a contextual introduction to European art, architecture and cultural history. Supplementing classroom-based learning with extensive visits to museums, galleries and places of historical interest it offers a survey of art in Europe over the last two centuries and gives students an opportunity to see for themselves many of the works studied. Beginning with the art of Antiquity, onto the Medieval World, the Renaissance, Enlightenment, Impressionism, Modernism, Cubism, Futurism, Dada & Surrealism the course enables students to recognise and critically analyze art movements and styles and understand how they both shape and are shaped by the society and era in which they are created.

ACADEMIC OVERVIEW

Academic credit for the program is awarded by Fairfield University. Fairfield University is a private Jesuit university founded in 1942 in Fairfield, Connecticut, well known for their commitment to international education. Fairfield is a fully accredited university and member of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. In 2020 Fairfield and AIFS partnered to develop a school of record relationship that will allow academic credit to be available for both Fairfield and non-Fairfield students.

Attendance at all lectures and site visits is mandatory.

Grades No AIFS participant is permitted to take a course without receiving a grade. Pass/Fail grade options are not available.

Transcripts are issued by Fairfield University. An official transcript will be sent directly to the student’s home university on completion of the program.

Why choose one destination for study abroad when you can experience several? Spend just over three weeks getting a taste of Europe across four countries and five fascinating cities. On this program, you’ll stay in London, Berlin, Prague, Kraków and Warsaw, visiting destinations of educational, historical and cultural significance along the way.

This program offers a unique opportunity for students interested in history, politics, religious studies, gender studies or international relations to gain in-depth understanding of the Holocaust. Classroom study will be supplemented with visits to special collections and archives in Europe as well as to the locations where some of these horrific events took place and/or are commemorated including Auschwitz and Birkenau, ‘Schindler’s Factory’ museum, the Warsaw Ghetto and Sachsenhausen. Students will also have the opportunity to meet with NGOs who are actively working to draw attention to, and support survivors and families of, the Holocaust and modern day genocide in places like Sudan.

Each stop will include an introduction to the new city to get you acclimated, and you will have free time for your own exploration. In addition to academic field trips related to your coursework, the program includes cultural excursions such as sightseeing tours in London and Berlin, a local brewery tour in Prague, traditional Polish music alongside dinner in Kraków and a tour of the Lazienki Palace in Warsaw.

HST 319 (3)
History of the Holocaust
The Holocaust was state sponsored mass murder, a genocide perpetrated on the Jewish people of Europe resulting in the deaths of approximately 6 million people. This course will initially focus on the period between 1933 and 1941, investigating the rise of National Socialism in Germany and the ideology and events which led to the Holocaust. Why did the Nazi Party rise to power, what conditions allowed this to develop and led to a systematic plan to exterminate the Jewish people of Europe? Factors such as the economic crisis of the 1930’s, Christian anti-Semitism and the development of eugenics and social Darwinism will be examined.

The balance of the course will look at how the advent of World War II led to the spread of this ideology beyond Germany’s borders and particular focus will be given to Central and Eastern Europe where the development of concentration camps led to the extermination of millions of European Jews. In addition to lectures, workshops and guest speakers, participants will visit relevant sites such as the House of Wannsee, Terezin and Auschwitz – Birkenau.

Academic credit for this course is awarded by Fairfield University. Fairfield University is a private Jesuit university founded in 1942 in Fairfield, Connecticut, well known for their commitment to international education. Fairfield is a fully accredited university and member of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

In 2020 Fairfield and AIFS partnered to develop a school of record relationship that will allow academic credit to be available for both Fairfield and non-Fairfield students. It is our collective goal that access to credit and financial aid options will increase access and opportunities for students.

This travelling program’s faculty credentials are reviewed and approved by Fairfield University.

Attendance at all lectures and site visits is mandatory.

Prerequisite One 100-level history course.

Grades No AIFS participant is permitted to take a course without receiving a grade. Pass/Fail grade options are not available.

Transcripts are issued Fairfield University. An official transcript will be sent directly to the student’s home university on completion of the program.

COMPARATIVE EDUCATION SYSTEMS
STUDY AND TRAVEL IN LONDON, BERLIN AND COPENHAGEN

LIVE
What is Forest School and how is this approach used in the teaching and learning of young children in Denmark? What is the controversy surrounding Academies in the English education system? Is higher education really free in Germany? Follow where your curiosity takes you and visit three of the most exciting cities in Europe - London, Berlin and Copenhagen - while learning about the education systems within their respective countries, England, Germany and Denmark. Share reflections on education with a teacher in a London school; visit a university campus in Berlin to learn about the student experience in Germany; take a guided tour of Fælledparken in Copenhagen to see firsthand the value Denmark places on ‘learning through play.’

LEARN
Earn 3 semester credits from Fairfield University on the Comparative Education Systems course and gain an understanding of the evolution of education systems in England, Germany and Denmark and the relationship they have with their respective societies. With faculty accompanying you throughout the tour you will explore the impact educational developments have on the economic, social and cultural landscape in all three countries. You will explore and critically analyze current controversies such as issues of inclusion and exclusion and how education impacts social mobility. The course will draw on experiential site visits including the Ragged Museum in London to learn about the history of schooling in England, discussions and debates with local education providers and trips to sites of social and cultural relevance.

EXPLORE
Beyond the classroom enjoy the most famous sights that these three exhilarating cities have to offer: see Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament in London; learn how families were divided East from West on a visit to the Berlin Wall; marvel at Viking treasures and iconic Danish design in Copenhagen - one of the greenest and most sustainable cities in the world.

EDU/HST 295 (3)
Comparative Education

This course will introduce students to comparative education systems of the U.K., Germany and Denmark and the relationship that the education systems have with their respective societies. The course will draw on experiential site visits and emphasize the key components of each system, from the setting up of “public schools” to the introduction of the 11+ test and the establishment of the Academies school system as experienced in London, to the focus on vocational teaching in Germany and the impact of learning-through-play as experienced by children in Copenhagen. Students will explore the impact educational developments have on the economy, skill formation, social inclusion and social mobility issues. Common controversies and contemporary debates such as the role of education in social mobility, social justice and issues of inclusion and exclusion will be explored and analyzed. The course will invite students to gain a comparative perspective on each of the three education systems and how they are experienced in order to gain a deeper understanding of the role of the different education systems on their respective societies.
ACADEMIC OVERVIEW

Attendance at all lectures and site visits is mandatory.

Grades No AIFS participant is permitted to take a course without receiving a grade. Pass/Fail grade options are not available.

Transcripts are issued by Fairfield University. An official transcript will be sent directly to the student’s home institution on completion of the program.

"The first wealth is health" wrote Ralph Waldo Emerson, and that has never been more relevant than today. Experience for yourself how spending a summer studying healthcare in some of the oldest and most beautiful cities of Europe will open your mind and transform how you see the world. Better understand the origins of global healthcare, compare how countries are managing current challenges and gain insight into how healthcare might look in the future, all while experiencing firsthand the sights, sounds and splendors of three fabulous countries.

LEARN

Earn 3 semester credits from Fairfield University on the Comparative Healthcare program and discover the various models of universal healthcare systems throughout Europe, learning how they compare and contrast with the system in the U.S. Accompanied by faculty you will learn about the foundations of the British National Health Service (NHS) and the rich medical history in London, as well as what it takes to become a medic in the UK on a visit to a busy city hospital. Onwards to Barcelona where you will discover how health systems on the continent differ, as well as learning about the investment and innovations in mental health support. Finally, to Florence, where we consider the benefits of the Mediterranean diet, approaches to senior care, and the aftermath of the 2020 Coronavirus pandemic. Now more than ever, healthcare is at the forefront of everyone’s minds.

EXPLORE

As well as exploring the healthcare systems of these three countries, you will see their most famous sights on professionally guided tours: see Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament in London; uncover the history of the Gothic Quarter’s ancient streets in Barcelona; marvel at the splendor of Renaissance Florence’s architectural masterpieces.

GLOBAL CUISINE
STUDY AND TRAVEL IN LONDON, BARCELONA AND FLORENCE

LIVE
Experience the sensational flavors, aromas, sights and sounds of Europe's food scene on a journey that takes you to three of its most iconic cities. Discover the origins of Britain’s love affair with curry in London’s East End, make your own classic pasta dish in Florence and sample the best locally produced olive oil in Barcelona. Visit and eat in the most authentic regional settings ‘where the locals go’ from food markets to local wineries and vineyards and even an historic ‘biscotti’ factory near Florence.

LEARN
Earn 3 semester credits from Fairfield University on the Global Cuisines: Food and Culture in Europe course and gain an understanding of the role of history, tradition and immigration in relation to global cuisines and food culture. Accompanied by faculty you will learn about different cultural identities through field trips directly linked to global cuisines and explore particular food products and their significance in the local and national culture. Taking a comparative approach, the course will critically analyze the food culture as experienced in the U.K., Italy and Spain and explain the complex relationship between different societies and their food culture. Firsthand experience of trying different foods and ingredients is a fundamental part of the course.

EXPLORE
As well as exploring the food culture of these three classic cities you will see their most famous sights on professionally guided tours: see Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament in London; uncover the history of the Gothic Quarter’s ancient streets in Barcelona; marvel at the splendor of Renaissance Florence’s architectural masterpieces. You will also sample Spanish and Italian wines during day trips to local producers and vineyards.

COURSE

HST/SOC 302 (3 credits)
Global Cuisine and Food Culture in Europe
This course will focus on the food culture in the three different locations of London, Barcelona and Florence. The course will introduce students to global cuisine in London and examine it as a cultural phenomenon inextricably linked to immigration. Taking a historical perspective, the course will explore the role of culinary dishes adopted as “national dishes” in the U.K., from fish and chips to chicken tikka masala, and analyze their origins and evolution into iconic British foods. The course will also explore the importance of food culture within Catalan and Tuscan societies and the specific social, economic and cultural factors behind making local produce. Students will be introduced to European legislation and the different classifications to promote and protect regional food sources and adhere to specific standards. Finally, the course will ask students to apply creative and original thinking by drawing lessons from global food cultures in how to address issues such as health, organic farming and “slow food” and how they are approached in the three respective countries.

Students will gain an understanding of the role of history, tradition and immigration in relation to global cuisines and food culture and be introduced to different cultural identities through field trips directly linked to global cuisine. They will explore the particular food products and their significance in the local and national culture and critically analyze food culture within London, Barcelona and Florence to evaluate the main challenges facing them.

The course will be taught through a combination of lectures and seminars, with emphasis on student attendance and participation and students are required to lead classroom discussion based on assigned readings and to present in groups on prepared topics. Discussion and debate are viewed as an essential part of the interactive and participatory learning programme. Students will participate in assignments and activities that require them to consider and reflect upon how their own and/or others’ attitudes about food culture are shaped as well as to explore the theme of “belonging” and transnational influence through the global cuisines they will encounter. Different areas of London, Barcelona and Florence will be visited throughout the course and firsthand experience of trying different foods and ingredients is a fundamental part of the course.

By the end of the course, students will be able to recognise and explain the complex relationship between different societies and their food culture and analyze the debates surrounding food culture and global cuisine offering a comparative approach between the U.K., Catalonia (Spain) and Italy as experienced in London, Barcelona and Florence.

Flm 285 (3 credits)
Introduction to European Cinema

This course examines major developments in European cinema and considers film in its historical, cultural, social, political, industrial, and aesthetic contexts. As well as analyzing significant movements in cinema, such as the French New Wave and Italian neorealism, and their historical backdrops, students will learn about the industry itself with a focus on the production, distribution, exhibition, and reception of films. Attention will also be paid to critical issues of migration, race, class, gender, and sexuality, along with concepts such as nation, nationality, and nationalism. In addition, the course will examine ways in which films appeal to international audiences and how film festivals and digital platforms play a part in the process. This course will be offered as part of a study tour which begins in London before traveling on to Paris and then Rome, three influential cities in European Cinema history. Included in this travel course are visits to film studios and museums, walking tours of film locations, and presentations from guest speakers who are experts in the field.

Transcripts are issued by Fairfield University. One official copy will be sent to the student’s home institution on completion of the program.

COURSES

CRM 333 (3)
Comparative Criminology and Criminal Justice
This course will provide a global, comparative approach to the study of criminal behaviour and criminal justice systems. It will debate the causes of crime and law enforcement practices and outcomes, with particular focus on the impact of ethnicity, gender, race and social class. Applying both a sociological and scientific approach, the course will analyze types of crime and its control, examining corrections, courts and policing around the world, with special focus upon Italy, the U.K. and the U.S. Teaching methods will be by lecture, discussion and fieldtrips to help students better understand the history of crime and its control in Italy and the UK.

HST/CRM 302 (3)
History of the Italian Mafia
This course explores the history of the Italian Mafia from the national unification of Italy until the present day. Topics studied include relationships within the organization, those between the Mafia and Italian politics, and those between the Italian and the American mafia. As part of the course students will visit Rebibbia State Prison, the Military Police School, the Italian Parliament/Senate and Libera, a network of over 1,200 associations which support the fight against organized crime.
THE SCIENCE OF WELLBEING
STUDY AND TRAVEL IN LONDON, BERLIN AND COPENHAGEN

Social Sciences | Psychology
Credit awarded by Fairfield University

LIVE
Explore London, Berlin and Copenhagen as you discover the factors that contribute to the wellbeing of both individuals and populations. Copenhagen consistently ranks highly on lists of the world's healthiest and happiest cities and the Danish concept of 'hygge' is central to the culture and way of life - find out how and why. Reflect on your own value systems as you gain an appreciation of the diversity inherent in the individual's lived experience of health and wellbeing.

LEARN
Earn 3 semester credits from Fairfield University on The Science of Wellbeing course. The course will encourage a comparative perspective on mental health and wellbeing in the U.K., Germany and Denmark and students will examine government policy in these areas in each of these countries. It combines traditional classroom learning with field trips, academic visits and industry expert discussions. Lectures and workshops will be complemented by visits to a range of relevant museums, wellbeing organizations and charity foundations.

EXPLORE
To complement your academic experience, you will also explore these three inspiring cities' most iconic sights on professionally guided tours: see Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament in London; learn about Berlin's history through its symbolic landmarks; soak up the atmosphere of Copenhagen's Tivoli Gardens and Nyhavn Canal. Academic field trips will highlight each city's concepts, theories and debates around wellbeing.

FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY

Academic credit for The Science of Wellbeing program is awarded by Fairfield University. Fairfield University is a private Jesuit university founded in 1942 in Fairfield, Connecticut, well known for their commitment to international education. Fairfield is a fully accredited university and member of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. In 2020 Fairfield and AIFS partnered to develop a school of record relationship that will allow academic credit to be available for both Fairfield and non-Fairfield students. Faculty credentials are reviewed and approved by Fairfield University.

COURSE

PSY/SOC 285 (3)
The Science of Wellbeing

The aim of this course is to provide an interdisciplinary overview of wellbeing as a scientific construct, with its underpinning biological, psychological, cultural and social determinants, exploring the factors that contribute to the wellbeing of individuals and populations. Students will develop an understanding of wellbeing as a relatively new concept (WHO, 1948) and its main current and emerging perspectives, rooted in psychology, neuropsychology and social behavior theories. The course will focus on some specific topics that are central to wellbeing, such as quality of life, happiness, resilience and what factors promote them; creativity and the arts and how these are being used in evidence-based ways to improve health and wellbeing, both in everyday life, but also within healthcare systems (i.e. art therapy and music therapy). The course will also introduce students to some of the main wellbeing measures currently utilized in science. Students will be encouraged to use a range of tools proposed during the course and apply them to understand health and wellbeing and their meaning in different individual, group and organizational contexts. The course will encourage a comparative perspective on mental health and wellbeing in the United Kingdom, Germany and Denmark and students will examine government policy on mental health and wellbeing in each of these countries.

Students will gain an understanding of the concept of wellbeing and its multiple dimensions and how they relate to one another and develop a critical understanding of the development of the scientific construct of wellbeing, the key current biopsychosocial theories that underpin it and the main paradigms, tools and methods currently applied within the wellbeing domain. They will develop an understanding of factors, including creativity and the arts, that promote wellbeing and more specifically key aspects such as quality of life, happiness, and resilience in a range of different individual, group and organizational contexts. Students will learn how these three different countries have adopted the concept of wellbeing in their government policies.

The course will be taught through a combination of lectures and seminars, with emphasis on student attendance and participation and students required to lead classroom discussion based on assigned readings and to present in groups on prepared topics. Discussion and debate are viewed as an essential part of the interactive and participatory learning program. TED talks, national wellbeing platforms (i.e. Action for Happiness movement, Public Health England's Every Mind Matters) will be used and explored in critical ways. Students are expected to apply critical analysis regarding the use of these resources. The course will also include appropriate field trips that are a key component of the experiential learning approach.

By the end of the course, students will demonstrate a sound knowledge of the historical development of wellbeing as a multidimensional construct, current theories and debates and have a critical understanding of how key wellbeing concepts apply to different domains of individuals’ lives and to societies. They will also have an initial understanding of how to apply wellbeing methods in research and a degree of autonomy, clarity, technical competence, capacity for self-evaluation and critical thinking in their assignment and the ability to apply a comparative analysis towards British, German and Danish healthcare policies with regard to wellbeing.

ACADEMIC OVERVIEW

SUSTAINABLE CITIES
STUDY AND TRAVEL IN LONDON, STOCKHOLM AND COPENHAGEN

social sciences | environmental studies | urban planning

Credit awarded by Fairfield University

LIVE
Modern, multi-cultural, green, innovative, and dynamic are just a few words to describe these three different European cities. Why are London, Stockholm and Copenhagen recognized as global leaders in sustainability and how do they continue to respond to global challenges? Spend your summer exploring and comparing these three wonderful cities. Experience the different initiatives and policies implemented and the role that individuals play in a sustainable focused society.

LEARN
Earn 3 credits from Fairfield University on the Sustainable Cities course and gain an understanding of sustainability in a holistic manner beyond the “3Rs”. The program combines traditional classroom learning with field trips, academic visits and industry expert discussions. Lectures and workshops will be complemented by visits to a range of relevant urban development and sustainability themed field trips.

EXPLORE
To complement your academic experience, you will also explore these three vibrant cities’ most iconic sights on professionally guided tours: see Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament in London; discover Stockholm’s old town Gamla Stan and the world’s first national urban park Ekoparken; soak up the “cool sustainability” atmosphere of Copenhagen’s Tivoli Gardens and Nyhavn Canal. Academic field trips in each city will highlight the different approaches and initiatives allowing you to take a comparative approach and gain a broad understanding of the efforts being made internationally to create a more sustainable way of life.

Course

ENV/SOC 220 (3 credits)
Sustainable Cities
This course will focus on the importance of sustainability across three different European cities: London (U.K.), Stockholm (Sweden) and Copenhagen (Denmark) to explore how each nation is responding to the global challenge. Students will be asked to apply a critical approach to issues including creating a green economy, investing in sustainable transportation systems, renewable power sources, flood defenses and dealing with waste. The course will include visits to urban regeneration projects to explore and assess their social, ecological, and economic contribution to their societies. Students will be required to critically analyze and compare urban initiatives such as the 2012 Olympics in London with the world’s first national urban park, Ekoparken in Stockholm. The course will explore sustainability as a phenomenon beyond global green politics and ask students to apply a holistic approach towards a sustainable model which encompasses social, ecological and economic factors and in which we can all play an individual role.

Students will gain an understanding of the role sustainability plays in three different cities in Europe and have an introduction to different sustainability initiatives in London, Stockholm and Copenhagen and to their successes and failures through field trips directly linked to sustainable development. They will learn to critically analyze and evaluate sustainability in a holistic manner beyond the “3Rs” and produce original and individual responses to the current issues.

The course will be taught through a combination of lectures and seminars, with emphasis on student attendance and participation and students required to lead classroom discussion based on assigned readings and to present in groups on prepared topics. Discussion and debate are viewed as an essential part of the interactive and participatory learning program. Students will participate in assignments and activities that require them to consider and reflect upon their own and/or others’ attitudes about sustainability issues.

By the end of the course students will be able to recognize and explain the specific relationship between sustainability and the three different European societies visited within the program. Students will also be able to demonstrate the ability to discuss, critically analyze and evaluate sustainability policies and initiatives in London, Stockholm and Copenhagen and arguments from advocates and critics towards these initiatives.
LONDON - 7 NIGHTS

COURSE

MUS 275 (3 credits)
Music History: Late Baroque to the Romantic Period
This course will focus on Western Music History from roughly 1700-1950, following the lives and contributions of some of the most iconic composers of that era. In particular, students will learn about, critically examine, contextualize and compare the works of German and Austrian composers (or those studying, living and/or working in Germany or Austria) who shaped and defined their respective musical genres such as Johann Sebastian Bach, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Felix Mendelssohn and Richard Strauss. Exploration of the political and economic context of the periods and locations in which these composers lived and worked will provide students with a comprehensive framework for their understanding and enable them to draw a nuanced historical picture of the music.

FASHION MARKETING
STUDY AND TRAVEL IN LONDON, PARIS, MILAN AND FLORENCE

fashion | marketing
Credit awarded by Fairfield University

LIVE
What better way to learn about the business of fashion than to witness it firsthand in 3 of the leading fashion capitals of the world - London, Milan and Paris. Throw in Florence for its fashion history and you have the perfect setting to see for yourself the different faces of the fashion industry and study how it operates within a global setting.

LEARN
Combining traditional classroom learning with visits to fashion museums, fashion manufacturers and fashion collections - in this course you will learn as much outside of the classroom as you will inside it. Learn about how to market fashion in the 21st century, visual merchandising, fashion branding and how the industry in Europe differs from that in the U.S. See for yourself the Renaissance, Elizabethan and Victorian influences on fashion in the different cities you visit. Be inspired by the fashion houses you will visit as part of the course.

EXPLORE
Spend 7 nights in London, 5 nights in Paris, 4 nights in Milan and 5 nights in Florence. The itinerary is carefully planned to maximize time in each location, ensuring you strike the right balance between classroom learning, academic visits, sightseeing activities and free time. Stay in central locations and visit iconic locations such as the Victoria and Albert Museum, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs in Paris, Lake Como for its Silk Museum and museums dedicated to the fashion designers Yves Saint Laurent and Gucci.

STORYTELLING IN AUSTRALIA
STUDY AND TRAVEL IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA

creative writing | journalism | photography | theater

Taught by faculty from the School of Arts at Murdoch University, Perth

LIVE
Spend 3 weeks in the state of Western Australia beginning and ending in Perth with a 10-day field trip in between. This is an opportunity for creative and adventurous students to experience the real Australia and indigenous culture including camping under the stars, swimming in gorges, visiting Outback towns and sheep stations, discovering Aboriginal cave paintings and enjoying beautiful beaches and reefs.

An optional 3-night visit to Sydney including a walking tour and a Blue Mountains day trip is available to students who select the AIFS flight package.

LEARN
Murdoch University is proud of its storytelling history and the university itself is located on land originally used by Aboriginal people as a place of learning. In recent years Murdoch has established a track record of award-winning storytelling through creative writing, theater and drama, films, journalism, photography and more recently games, podcasts and social media.

Storytelling in Australia invites students to unlock their own creativity and storytelling talents, introducing them to Australian history, culture, landscape and people through an immersive course for a recommended 4 U.S. semester credits.

EXPLORE
The program begins in Perth, a vibrant coastal city which offers a cosmopolitan experience alongside a relaxed outdoor lifestyle. Then depart on a unique 10-day tour. This journey will take you deep into the diverse landscape of Western Australia to explore the stunning coastline, old mining towns and the natural swimming holes and gorges of Karijini National park, sleeping in tents beneath the stars in true Aussie style.

LIVE
Spend your summer in Western Australia including 13 nights in Perth and a 10-day field trip based around the World Heritage-listed Ningaloo Reef and Marine Park, Australia’s longest fringing coral reef, considered to be one of the last great ocean paradises on Earth. The field trip includes a glass bottom boat tour, a wildlife cruise and a snorkeling trip to see up close the array of marine life living among the coral. In Perth, you’ll experience city life by the sea and live on campus at Murdoch University. An optional 3-night visit to Sydney including a walking tour and a Blue Mountains day trip is available to students who select the AIFS flight package.

LEARN
The Tropical Marine Biology program gives students a rare opportunity to conduct research at the Coral Bay Research Station. Topics covered will include the diversity and physical processes of Western Australia’s marine habitats, an introduction to coral reefs, tropical biodiversity, human impacts and management, and marine park management. Earn 4 semester credits from Murdoch University, Perth.

EXPLORE
What better place to study marine biology than Australia, home to some of the most diverse oceans in the world and the largest area of coral reefs. The reef is very close to the shore in many areas meaning that you can snorkel straight from the beach. See the vast array of tropical fish and swim over coral gardens. You will also spend time in Perth, the capital of Western Australia. This cosmopolitan city situated on the banks of the Swan River offers a vibrant lifestyle with a year-round sunny climate. Offering the best of urban life in its restaurants, cafés and art galleries together with excellent beaches and access to outdoor activities including kitesurfing and sailing, Perth is a superb place to visit.

ACADEMIC OVERVIEW

Murdoch University has an outstanding reputation for Marine and Environmental Science. It was the first university in Australia to offer environmental science and the first in western Australia to offer marine science. Home to the Centre for Fish and Fisheries Research with strong links to the Western Australian Marine Science Institute, the university owns the Coral Bay Research Station located on the World Heritage-listed Ningaloo Reef where the field study portion of this program will be located.

COURSE

BIO 393 (4)
Tropical Marine Biology
Ningaloo Reef is Australia’s longest fringing coral reef and one of the world’s largest. This broad-ranging advanced marine biology unit provides an opportunity to study tropical marine biology and ecology in a coral reef setting. It introduces Western Australian biogeography and habitats, covering advanced topics in biology, physiology and ecology of marine plants and animals. Human impacts and conservation of tropical marine environments will be addressed. The field camp will provide training and experience in field techniques. The course includes a 10-day intensive field camp to Coral Bay, 15 hours of theory class on campus at Murdoch University in Perth and 2 laboratory classes and computer workshops.

Prerequisites: This is a final year course at Murdoch University therefore interested AIFS students should ideally have completed 2 general biology units and be majoring in a related scientific field.

Reading: A Tropical Marine Biology unit reader containing all lecture notes will be provided on a USB stick on arrival in Perth.

Assessment Group presentations (x 2) based on field camp projects (30%); project group reports (x 2) based on field camp projects (30%); tutorial participation (10%); exam (30%).

Attendance at all lectures and site visits is mandatory.

Grades No AIFS participant is permitted to take a course without receiving a grade. Pass/Fail grade options are not available.

SAFETY AND SECURITY

We are committed to ensuring the safety and security of our program participants. This “peace of mind” commitment includes the following features—all standard on AIFS programs:

» 24-hour emergency service in the U.S. and abroad
» On-site Resident Directors and local support staff to provide guidance and assistance
» Comprehensive insurance/assistance package that includes medical coverage abroad, program cancellation/interruption insurance and baggage coverage
» Financial security—a unique policy that protects every student’s payment and guarantees he or she will receive the services advertised in this catalog.

"My daughter attended a summer program in Italy and I was very impressed with the orientation session that was held at the beginning. They discussed safety precautions in detail and even had a local police officer speak to the students about common issues encountered by American tourists and how to avoid those situations."
—Katy, AIFS Study Abroad Parent

“This program was excellent! AIFS was one of the best experiences of my life.”
—Joe, Providence College

“I would absolutely recommend this program. The trip has been such a positive experience. Wonderful program!”
—Hilary, Chatham College

“AIFS has a lot to offer. The more I talked to American students from other programs, the more I realized that AIFS was clearly the best choice.”
—Alison, Central Connecticut State University

“I would recommend this program to other prospective students. It was well organized with excellent accommodations and wonderful faculty. A once in a lifetime experience!”
—Seth, St. Edwards University

“This program opened my eyes to a culture and society I knew very little about. I made great friends and had a fabulous time during the process. I would do it all over again in a heartbeat.”
—Jessica, Western Michigan University

Academic focus
Does the program offer courses that will help you move closer towards your academic goals? Review the sample lists of course offerings for an idea of the classes you may take in that particular program. You will also want to set up a time to chat with the study abroad office at your home institution to discuss credit transfer ahead of time.

Location
If you are not sure where you want to study abroad, narrow down your options a bit by asking yourself general questions like:
- Am I looking for a big city experience?
- Am I looking to improve my foreign language skills?
Ask your friends who have studied abroad why they chose their program location. You can also talk to Jacqueline Hatch at the AIFS home office who can share why other students choose certain locations or share her own experience choosing a program. You can also connect with AIFS alumni to get a better sense of their experience and why they chose their specific program.

When?
Spring? Fall? Summer? Winter term? Knowing when you want to study abroad can have a big impact on where you study abroad.

Discuss with your school
Make an appointment with your academic advisor to ensure your courses and credits are approved for transfer. It is important to be aware that your home university may also have specific steps that they require you to follow on their side.

Find funding
Are you receiving financial aid? Meet with the financial aid office on your home university's campus to see if the funds you receive are applicable to your semester abroad. View scholarship and grant opportunities that you may be eligible for. Over 50% of our study abroad participants receive financial support through AIFS in the form of scholarships or grants.

Apply
Complete the online application for the study abroad program of your choice!

Prepare for your departure
Apply for (or renew) your passport as soon as possible. Your passport is absolutely essential to your trip abroad. It is vital that you read all of the information provided to you by your Admissions Officer, as you may need to apply for a student visa.
